TO ASK BRODBECK TO DROP CHARGES

Democrats will Send a Committee to him and Ask that Proceedings against Mr. Beales be Discontinued. The Testimony.

It was announced in York at noon today that a committee of prominent Democrats would visit Congressman Brodbeck at his home in Hanover this evening in an effort to have him withdraw his charges against Congressman-elect Beales and end the present controversy. Nine witnesses were called during the morning hearing at which no new evidence of any serious weight was produced. Mr. Brodbeck was present for the first time, having come from Washington to confer with his attorneys.

For the purpose of taking testimony twelve witnesses were present this morning but only nine were heard. The principal one was Dan Kraft who was alleged to have waved three $1 bills in front of the First Precinct, Twelfth Ward, polling place, saying that he had gotten it for his vote. He denied this morning that he had gotten the money in that way and said he had earned it the week before in legitimate work. He did say, however, that Louis Keller gave him a drink on election day, but not for his vote.

"Where did you get the drink?" asked Attorney Ruby.

"That's none of your business," answered the witness.

"I don't see how we could improve on the testimony of Mr. Kraft," said Mr. Black, "and I have no cross examination."

"I'm much obliged to you, Jere," said Kraft as he left the stand "Now I'll go and get another drink."

"Charles Wasser, a Democratic judge in the Third Precinct of the Twelfth Ward, told of having prepared a list of 35 or 40 names of voters on election day who were receiving assistance at the polls. Mr. Black succeeded in eliciting an admission from Mr. Geesey that J. Thurman Atkins, Democratic Chairman of York County, had set a letter asking that this be done, and then Mr. Black cited the Act of 1903 which prohibits the preparation of any list of voters by the election officers at the polls.

Attorney Ruby objected to Mr. Black's offer being put on the record saying that it was evidence for Mr. Beales.

Nothing of importance was elicited from the other witnesses called during the morning. The hearing will be continued in Gettysburg on Tuesday, unless Mr. Brodbeck decides to drop the whole affair.

Friday Afternoon

Two bits of testimony, damaging to the Brodbeck cause, were offered at Friday afternoon's hearing in York. The first came when John W. Welsh testified that two colored men had been offered orders on the York Benevolent Society for provisions and fuel if they would vote for Brodbeck. The offer was said to have been made by members of the Fry family. The second was the testimony of Howard Kottcamp who testified that "Snoot" Fry had offered him a case of beer if he would allow him (Fry) to mark his ticket for Brodbeck.

John Barnhart said he did not know of there being any money offered and made the observation that he would have gotten some of it if there had been. Harry S. Young, Democratic inspector, said that both parties had men who helped voters mark their tickets. The other witnesses gave no testimony of special value.

The York Dispatch of Friday evening stated that recently Congressman Brodbeck refused the request of 25 or 30 York County Democrats who urged him to withdraw the contest.

MAGICIAN FOR THE CONVENTION

Adams County School Directors will Have Relief from Weighty Discussions of Prominent Educators. Entertainment at Night.

When the Adams County school directors convene here on February 11 for their two days' sessions they will not be confronted with a program composed of nothing but lectures. This was determined upon this morning at a meeting of the board of officers of the Directors' Association which was held in the office of County Superintendent Roth.

The committee determined to engage as the evening attraction for Thursday, Taber, the magician, who has gained wide-spread fame by his performances. He is guaranteed to provide an evening of fun and entertainment and, after a day in which weighty subjects will be discussed, it is believed that this will be heartily welcomed by the directors.

The officers were much pleased with Prof. Roth's plans for the coming convention and ratified his engagement of Commissioner Claxton, Inspector Pentz and two other prominent educators as the speakers for the two days.

The course this year will entail more expense than usual on the officials who are not allowed to incur an outlay of more than $200. To meet the excess, which is due to the employment of Taber, the magician, a small admission will be charged the general public for the evening entertainment. Directors will be admitted free to all sessions.

ELECTED OFFICERS

Hanover Fair Shows a Profit of $3,666 for 1914.

The Hanover Agricultural Society has decided on holding the annual fair next fall and elected officers. These officers were chosen: president, C. J. Delone; vice president, C. N. Myers; treasurer, T. J. Little; secretary, S. A. Geiselman; directors, C. J. Delone, C. N. Myers, C. S. Shirk, H. D. Sheppard, H. M. Stokes, Ward C. Haffner, W. B. Allevett, A. F. Hostetter, D. Guy Hollinger, J. J. Schmidt, H. N. Gitt.

The receipts of the fair of 1914 were $14,562.35, and the expenses $10,895.69, a net gain of $3,666.66. The debt of the society is about $30,000, the interest charges being over $1,700.

DEFEATED BUCKNELL

Gettysburg too Fast for Basket Ball Men at Lewisburg.

The two orange and blue basket ball teams met at Lewisburg on Friday evening and Gettysburg's men triumphed over Bucknell by the decisive score of 44 to 27. Campbell and Mehaffie were the stars and did almost all of the scoring while the entire team played such a strong defensive game that Bucknell was held within a safe margin.

The reserves lost to St. Mary's at McSherrystown Friday evening in an extra period game. Score 27 to 24.

MEAT STOLEN

Martin Boyer's Smoke House Visited by Thieves.

Martin Boyer, living a mile south of Biglerville, lost nine pieces of meat, with a quantity of sausage from his smoke house one night this week. He does not know on what night it was removed, as he had not visited the smoke house for several days. There are no clues to the guilty persons.

ALL READY FOR THE INSTITUTES

Farmers' Meetings to be Held in Adams County Every Day Next Week. East Berlin, Hunterstown and Bendersville the Places.

All arrangements have been completed for the series of farmers' institutes to be held in Adams County next week under the direction of the State Department of Agriculture.

Monday and Tuesday sessions will be held in the P. O. S. of A. hall at East Berlin; Wednesday and Thursday in the Methodist church, at Hunterstown; and Friday and Saturday, in Fruit Growers' Hall, Bendersville. Aaron I. Weidner will preside at all sessions.

At East Berlin Monday afternoon C. L. Miller will make the address of welcome. The first address will be made by William M. Patton, of Mosgrove; and the second by J. T. Campbell, of Hartstown. In the evening Vern T. Struble will make an address and Mr. Campbell will also speak. These three men will cover poultry raising and farm topics in general. They will speak at all three institutes. A query box is to be a feature at all the meetings. At East Berlin it will be in charge of Mervin Spangler.

Edward Trostle will make the address of welcome at the opening session at Hunterstown on Wednesday afternoon, H. G. Deatrick and R. D. Myers will have charge of the query box. Here as at the other towns there will be an afternoon and evening session the first day, and three meetings the second day.

At Bendersville Rev. Joseph Arnold will welcome the first audience and there will be two additional speakers at the sessions at this last place. On Friday evening Theo. W. Wittman, of Allentown, will give an illustrated lecture on "Poultry Houses, Good and Bad"; and Friday afternoon F. W. Schilling will talk on "The Use of Cement on the Farm". J. B. Garretson, T. F. Day and Harry Pitzer will be the query committee at this place.

An attractive list of subjects has been arranged by the State lecturers and it is believed that a large attendance will be registered. J. T. Campbell will give an illustrated talk at each place on "How Nature Makes Soil". Local committees have charge of the final details for the institutes.

SUBSTANTIAL BEQUESTS

Ardmore Woman Remembers Gettysburg Family in her Will.

All children under fourteen years of age desiring to unite with the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Lutheran church will meet at the parsonage Wednesday evening at seven o'clock.

GUERNSEY

Guernsey--An interesting entertainment was held at Sunnyside school house on Friday evening. The program consisted of recitations and dialogues by the pupils. Very few teachers were present to take part in the discussions. A full house, as usual when anything is scheduled for Sunnyside.

C. Arthur Griest, wife and daughter, arrived home last night from a two weeks' visit to Lansford, New York, and Passaic, N. J.

The fortieth anniversary of the wedding of Amos W. Griest and wife at Flora Dale was celebrated on Thursday evening by about fifty of their friends assembling to congratulate them and enjoy an evening of merriment and good wishes. Many gifts were received with appropriate verses. After partaking of the good things, and the good cheer, all voted that the pleasure of the evening could only be excelled by a similar meeting on the fiftieth anniversary.

George G. Griest, of Canada, has again returned to that place.

Roy Diehl, who has had the grippe, is now able to be about again.

Mrs. P. C. Epplenman, who spent a week in Baltimore, has returned to her home near Guernsey.

Quite a few people will exchange places in the Spring.

INTO BOILING LARD

Little Girl Has Terrible Experience. Will Recover.

Catharine Raffensperger, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Raffensperger, of near New Oxford, was painfully burned Thursday afternoon when she fell backward into a kettle of boiling lard. Her father, hearing her screams, rushed to her and saved her from fatal injuries. The lower part of the child's body was terribly scalded but, it is believed, she will recover. The father and a woman from a neighboring farm, who helped to remove the clothing from the little girl, were badly burned about the hands.

FROM SOLDIER

From Rizal, Philippine Islands, comes a letter to the Gettysburg post office addressed to "Mr. Miller, York Street, near School House, Gettysburg Granite". A photograph accompanies the letter. Both are from Joseph Forester, I Troop, 8th Cavalry. An effort on the part of the post office people to locate the person for whom both were intended has, up to this time, proved unavailing.

ANOTHER GIFT

Mrs. Catherine Schlosser Gives $100 to Wenksville Church.

The congregation of the Wenksville Lutheran church has again been surprised by a generous gift of $100. This time it came from Mrs. Catherine Schlosser who is now in her 89th year, the oldest person in that community. The money is to go for repairs when needed.

GERMANS FAIL IN NEW ATTACKS

Repulsed in Attempts to Cross
Aisne at Soissons.

THEIR OFFENSIVE HALTED

French Airmen Shell invaders' Trenches and German Aviators Again Attack Dunkirk.

Paris, Jan. 30.—The Germans have launched another drive on the French positions in the region of Soissons, where they made considerable progress more than a week ago, and once again this offensive of the Teuton forces failed.

To the east of that town the troops of the kaiser made two attempts to gain a foothold on the lower bank of the Aisne river and to dislodge the French forces from their entrenched positions in that section of the western battle front.

These attacks were repulsed and the Germans were forced to retire to their trenches north of that river. This information was contained in an official statement issued in Paris.

The first of these was made at the head of the bridge to the north of the bridge of Venizel, held by the French, but the heavy artillery fire of the French guns and the concentrated fire of the infantry forced the Germans to abandon their attempt. Their losses were severe. The other onslaught was made at the Mill of the Rocks, but this, likewise, was repulsed.

On other sections of the battle front there was a lull in the fighting, but heavy artillery exchanges continued throughout the day. Only in the region of Ypres, Lens and Arras were there any infantry attacks, but each of the attempts of the Germans to gain ground in that section met with failure.

The official statement of the war office says:

"At the east of Soissons the Germans have made two attempts to cross the Aisne—one at the Mill of the Rocks and the other at the head of the bridge, which is held by our troops to the north of the bridge of Venizel. These two attacks were repulsed.

"During the night of Jan. 28 Dunkirk was bombed by more aviators, who caused some insignificant losses, but killed or wounded only a few persons.

"Between 11 o'clock the night of Jan. 28, and 2 o'clock of the morning of Jan. 29, two of our aviators launched numerous bombs upon the enemy's works in the region of Laon, Laferre and Soissons. On the morning of the 29th a German aeroplane was brought down east of Gerberville. Its pilot and mechanic, a German officer and sub-officer, were made prisoners.

"The day of Jan. 28 saw nothing more than local engagements, which resulted favorably to us. In Belgium, in the vicinity of Nieport, our infantry secured a footing on Grande Dune, a locality which was mentioned in the communication of Jan. 17. A German aeroplane was brought down by our artillery fire.

"In the sections of Lens, Ypres and Arras there were artillery engagements, which at times became fairly violent. Several infantry attacks were undertaken, but at once driven back by our fire. In the section of Soissons, Craonne and Rheims there is nothing to report. Between Rheims and the Argonne there were artillery engagements, but not of great intensity.

"It has been confirmed that the German attack repulsed by us on the night of Jan. 27-28 at Fontaine Madame cost the Germans dear."

NEW AIR ATTACK ON DUNKIRK

Many Bombs Dropped on British Provision Depots in French City.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—The official statement issued by the German general army headquarters says:

"In the western theater during a night expedition made by one of our aeroplane squadrons the English provision establishments of the fortress of Dunkirk were attacked, and many bombs were dropped.

"An attack made by the enemy in the dunes to the northwest of Nieport was repulsed. The enemy, who penetrated at one place as far as our trenches, was repulsed by a night attack.

"To the south of La Bassée canal the English attempted to recapture positions which he had taken from them, but their attack easily was repulsed. Nothing of importance took place on the remainder of the front."

Report Four Airmen Lost in Raid.

Copenhagen, Jan. 30.—It is reported in Berlin that four German airmen lost their lives in the Zeppelin raid on England. Three aeroplanes escorted the Zeppelins to Yarmouth. One is said to have been brought down by shells from warships and another to have capsized, the pilot and observer in both machines being drowned.

Austria May Seize Grain.

Venice, Jan. 30.—Dispatches from Vienna state that the city council and the press are demanding that the Austrian government immediately follow the example of Germany and confiscate all stocks of grain, flour and meal. Practically no grain is being offered on the markets in Vienna, Budapest and Prague.

CUT TURK RAILWAY LEADING TO EGYPT

British Land in Syria and Destroy Communications.

Cairo, Jan. 30.—British soldiers have carried the war into the Turks' stronghold by landing at Alexandretta and destroying several miles of the railroad through Syria on which the Ottoman troops depend for supplies in their campaign against Egypt.

The British soldiers returned to their vessels after accomplishing this feat without a single man being wounded.

That some of the Turks invading Egypt have already reached the Suez canal is indicated by news of a skirmish Wednesday near milestones No. 80 and No. 82. Only a few men were engaged.

So far as news is concerned, the Turks supposed to be advancing into Egypt are marooned somewhere on the sands of the desert. Not a word has been heard of them since the announcement, three days ago, of their presence east of El Kantara.

TWO GERMAN SHIPS DISABLED

Derflinger in Drydock and Roon Damaged in North Sea Fight.

Paris, Jan. 30.—The German battle cruiser Derflinger was badly damaged in Sunday's naval battle in the North sea, in which the cruiser Bluecher was sunk by the British fleet, according to an announcement by the ministry of foreign affairs, and has been placed in drydock at Hamburg for repairs.

The cruiser Roon also is believed to have been damaged. It is anchored at Cuxhaven. The battle cruisers Seydlitz and Moltke, which participated in the combat, are anchored at Helgoland, and are understood to have been undamaged.

The Derflinger is a new and powerful vessel of 28,000 tons, with Krupp armor, carrying eight twelve-inch guns and twelve 5.9-inch guns. The Roon displaces 9350 tons and has twelve 8.2-inch guns.

GERMAN LOSSES ENORMOUS

Incomplete Casualty List Totals 988,960 Teuton Soldiers.

Amsterdam, Jan. 30.—Prussian casualties up to Jan. 21 had reached the enormous total of 988,960, according to figures published by the Nieuwe Rotterdamse Courant.

It says that these figures are taken from 141 lists of Prussian losses, and continues:

"This total comprises killed, missing and wounded, the wounded numbering 615,000. Of these about 40 per cent have already returned to the front.

"To the total of 988,960 will be added 140 Bavarian, 98 Saxon, 99 Wuertembergian and 14 naval casualty lists, to show the complete losses of the Teutonic armies."

General Pau to Lead Russian Army.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—The Over Seas News Agency received reports from Geneva, Switzerland, to the effect that General Gerald Pau, the noted French army commander, had been sent to Russia to take over the command of one of the Russian armies in Poland.

9238 Dead at Avezzano.

Rome, Jan. 30.—It was officially announced that the casualties in the city of Avezzano resulting from the recent earthquake were 9238 dead and that there were 2040 survivors, of whom the majority were injured.

GERMANS MOVE IN GALICIA

Advance on Russians to Relieve Przemyśl

BATTLE LINE OF 100 MILES

Czar Claims Progress in East Prussia, West of Warsaw and on Galician Front.

London, Jan. 30.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Times describes the great concentration of the Austro-German forces in the mid-Carpathians as the dominant feature of the military situation.

"The movements of the Austrians and Germans," says the correspondent, "are rapidly developing along a front a hundred miles long, from Dukla to Wyszow."

"Their columns are trying to cross the mountains by numerous passes, fed by the four important railways from the south. Przemyśl stands in the center of their line, and its relief apparently forms the objective."

Russia Claims Gains in Prussia.

Petrograd, Jan. 30.—The general staff of the Russian army issued a report on the progress of the fighting as follows:

"In the country to the north of Tilsit, East Prussia, Russian detachments on Jan. 25 took the offensive and drove back the Germans, destroying the railroad station at Pogege."

"The fighting in the forest country north of Pilkalen and Gumbinnen continues, and we are making progress. Along the rest of the front in East Prussia, Jan. 27 passed quietly, except in the country to the northeast of Darkehmen. Here the Germans attacked our positions, but they were driven back to their trenches."

"On the right bank of the lower Vistula encounters continue. On the left bank, in the vicinity of Borjowmo, Russian troops, aided by sappers, delivered an attack. In this same locality the Germans assumed offensive operations, but without success."

"The artillery duel along the left bank of the Vistula continued Jan. 27. Our shell fire silenced several batteries and inflicted heavy losses. This was particularly true near Jidomitz, where we saw Germans carrying numerous dead and wounded from their trenches."

"In Galicia, along the Carpathian front, from the Dukla Pass to the railroad running between Stry and Mounkatch, we were engaged Jan. 26 and 27, with successful results. Our success to the southwest of Dukla Pass was particularly important. Here our troops, advancing with energy, compelled the enemy to retreat in haste."

"In the vicinity of Tsekhanie and Dolikiny we captured, on Jan. 27, an earthwork of the enemy and we surrounded a second position close to this first one. During these operations we took a number of prisoners."

"At certain points along this front the enemy has made particular efforts to assume the offensive, but every where these attacks have resulted in complete failure."

Berlin Hears of Success.

Berlin, Jan. 30.—The most encouraging war news, from the German viewpoint, comes from the Carpathian region, where Austrian successes are reported to have been achieved consistently for some time.

The latest feat of the Austrians is said to have been the driving of the Russians from the Nagay valley.

Dispatches from Vienna state that the Russians probably will be compelled soon to evacuate the Galician city of Lemberg, which they have occupied for several months.

The temperature in East Prussia has fallen to thirteen degrees above zero. Thus far, however, the cold weather does not appear to have affected military activity.

RUSSIA DENIES PEACE MOVE

Says Report Is False Czar Will Cease Hostilities in Return For Galicia.

Petrograd, Jan. 30.—The Vienna Allgemeine Zeitung has published an article alleging that Russia has discussed the possibility of concluding a separate peace with Austro-Hungary, based on the cession of Galicia by Austria-Hungary, and Russia's consent that Serbia be incorporated in the dual monarchy.

The Russian semi-official news agency has issued a categorical denial of this rumor. It is described as utterly without foundation and circulated by newspapers of Austria with ulterior motives.

Disenfranchisement of the Austro-Hungarian empire will be the penalty if Russia wins, according to an officially inspired article in the Bourse Gazette, which says:

"Peace may be made only after a complete and final victory over Germany. Only in that event can enduring tranquility prevail in Europe."

The President Honors McKinley.

Washington, Jan. 30.—President Wilson and employees of the White House yesterday wore carnations in honor of the seventy-second birthday anniversary of the late President William McKinley. Many of the present White House attaches were at the White House during the McKinley administration.

LEFT FORTUNE BY WIFE HE DIVORCED

Woman Wrote, "He Was Never Unkind to Me."

Altoona, Pa., Jan. 30.—Divorced by her husband, who later married another woman, Mrs. Lillie Lindsay Tucker, of Hollidaysburg, a prominent church and temperance worker, left all her property to her former husband, George Tucker, a New York manufacturer.

The two had been playmates in their school days in Hollidaysburg, and after their marriage lived happily together for many years. Then came an estrangement and he went to Reno, Nevada, and obtained a divorce. She wrote the court a letter at the time, denouncing the lax divorce laws of Nevada.

Later Tucker married a Buffalo society woman. Mrs. Tucker had willed her property to her divorced husband long ago and refused to leave it to anybody else.

"He was never unkind to me," she wrote. "He is mine in the sight of God. What God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Tucker is at present on a yachting trip in the south.

LIQUOR FIGHT IS RENEWED

Delaware Legislature Gets Bill For Local Option.

Dover, Del., Jan. 30.—The war of "wets" and "drys" over Kent and Sussex counties, purged of saloons several years ago, was renewed in the legislature here, when Representative Jones, a leader of the "wet" faction, introduced a re-submission bill.

This provides that the local option question shall first be voted upon in 1918, and every eight years thereafter.

Clubwomen of the state, reinforced by several manufacturers, appeared before the revised statute committee to protest against the proposed repeal of the ten-hour woman's employment bill.

BRITISH OFFICER TELLS HOW WAR NEWS CAUSED GREAT ACTIVITY

Declares That Tens of Millions of Men Are Available For England.

Realized That Those Who Go to Front Are Not Likely to Return.

AN English officer, who was home on leave when the war began and who hurried to his station in India after the outbreak of hostilities has written the following letter to a friend in New York from Lahore, Punjab:

Personally I have a very hazy recollection of what did happen. It was all so sudden. I was trying to catch a saloon, with my little dog looking on approvingly, when a man came up to me on the bank with a telegram. "Forty-eight hours to catch the troop ship Dougala at Southampton." That was what the telegram said, and I had to get my back to it to get there in time. I put my belongings on the motor and drove to the nearest station. Here I produced authority to commandeer the whole train if necessary, and everything went on the train—everything except the car.

I arrived in London in hot haste, collected everything I could lay my hands on in the time, and next day by special train reached Southampton, and so boarded the old trooper. What a voyage that was! The trooper had accommodations for 120 officers and 1,200 of officers were detailed for her. At Southampton 300 were stopped on the platform and taken back to London. Others were recalled before we sailed, and finally we were shot off into the vasty deep, 800 officers on a ship to hold 120.

Half the Crew Deserted.

Half the crew had deserted. The provisioning of the ship had been left to the last minute and was unspeakable. But we managed. The Empire was just beginning to hum, young lady, and we were the first lot of hornets let loose. And the first lot got a thin time of it. What a din of confusion there was! Generals, colonels, majors, captains, subalterns, chaplains, doctors, naval men and telegraphists all mixed up in one hopeless tangle.

We slept in the hold, on boxes, in boats, on stairs—anywhere you could find a place to lie down in. Finally we sorted ourselves and went about things as the Englishman always has done. We scrubbed and cleaned the decks, we waited on each other in turns, fed ourselves, the naval men navigated the ship, and relays of subalterns stoked her as required. We packed the baggage and arranged everything in an orderly fashion.

Some had uniforms, some had not, and many had only what they stood up in. Then came a sorting and a leaching and a borrowing, so that all might be clean and keep clean. And then we must have games and sports, for we are a race that likes to live clean, fight clean and not worry very much about the future.

The Voyage to India.

I could fill volumes with that voyage, but will spare you. How we were escorted by torpedo craft which suddenly left us; how we rescued a Portuguese fishing boat in mid-ocean and then were chased by a cruiser which stopped us with a shot; how she turned out to be French, and we all fell on each other's necks metaphorically; how we lined our decks and cheered, and how they cheered, and we cried "A Berlin!" our route being via Boubay, and they cried "A Berlin!" their route being via God knows where; how we cheered the Highlander out of "Gib" when she started off to sink the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and did it forty-eight hours afterward.

How we watched the arrivals from the Adriatic fight in Malta. How H. M. S. Warrior played us "And Lang Syne" as we passed into the canal, and how we replied with "Britannia Rules the Waves," and how every ship in the offing took it up and that end of Egypt rang with the old song. How we yelled to the Russian volunteer fleet steam-

THINK KIPLING MISTAKEN.

Writers Deny That the English Are the Only Humorous People.

In a recent article Rudyard Kipling wrote: "England's new armies are humorous because, for all our long faces, we are the only genuinely humorous race on earth."

E. V. Lucas thinks that Mr. Kipling probably meant "facetious" instead of "humorous," for he says, "Humor implies imagination, and in imagination we are a race as rich as rich."

F. Anster also dissents from Mr. Kipling's view, saying: "If such a claim were seriously made I should regard it as dangerously near the German boast that their nation is the sole possessor of genuine culture. Perhaps Mr. Kipling meant to include our American cousins under 'we.'"

Walter Emanuel does not consider the British a humorous nation, and says:

"Although I have never been in the United States, I should say that America is a nation of humorists, to judge by the intense wit of its slang, which I take to be current conversational coin there. Over here, speaking broadly, one has to ring a bell before making a joke, or it will pass unnoticed."

Superfluous Information.

It is quite superfluous for a man to tell a woman he isn't worthy of her. If she thought he was, she wouldn't want him.

King of Game Fish.

The grandest of all fish leapers is tarpon, otherwise "silver king," or "grand eadlie," a monster herring, which may measure six or seven feet and weigh a couple of hundred pounds.

WHAT?

After the war is all over—
After the dead are forgot;
Ask for the cause of the carnage—
History will answer you, What?

After rebuilding the cities—
Leveled by cannon and shot;
Ask for the reason they did it—
History will answer you, What?

After all kings are forgotten.
Whether they caused it or not;
Down through the ages to come yet
The echo will always be, What?

MANY GERMAN LIVES SAVED BY "DOGS OF WAR."

"Sanitatshunde" Found Wounded Who Otherwise Would Have Perished.

The Kaiser's canine conscripts, the "sanitatshunde," or ambulance dogs, have proved such a success in the west, where they have been employed for several months, that by special order of the minister of war the number of dogs attached to each ambulance company is to be increased to eight, while at the urgent request of Field Marshal von Hindenburg 250 additional dogs have been sent to the east. How they work is vividly described by the commander of a dog division, who rejoices in the imposing title of "sanitatshund-fuhrer," in the following report:

"At 7 in the evening we started for the battlefield, where we were already eagerly awaited by our grievously wounded comrades. We learned that the enemy had been driven back two or three miles. It was a pitch dark night, with heavy fog. At the command 'Hunt the wounded' the dogs dashed ahead into the woods, we following them as rapidly as possible so that they wouldn't have to bark too long and so draw the enemy's fire on us, for we were now close to his trenches.

"It wasn't long before we heard barking, and we headed in the direction from which it came. The dogs came running back to meet us and guided us ahead until we came upon one poor devil who lay on the ground groaning, his eyes fixed on the dog. 'Help me, dear comrade. For God's sake, give me something to drink!' he cried out to us. I gave the poor fellow some coffee from my flask, then put him on a stretcher and had him carried back, while we again pressed on, for we heard more barking ahead. And so it went all night long till we had thoroughly searched the battlefield. Fourteen wounded who were found in the dark woods by our dogs could never have been found by our ambulance men and would have been left to their fate. You cannot picture the horror of it. At daybreak we went back to camp with our four footed brothers in arms, and all hands dropped in their tracks for a much needed sleep."

From the military hospital at Bonn a member of the engineer corps writes the following testimonial to the ambulance dogs:

"I was wounded in the ankle, and with several other comrades, including a first lieutenant, all founded, hid in the cellar of a house in a small village. We were locked in, either by the inhabitants or other French, who tried to drown us out by running water into the cellar. For three days and nights we stood up to our breasts in water, without food, and had given up all hope of being saved when presently we heard a dog sniffing around at a small opening in the wall, and then to our great joy saw the dog's head. The officer grabbed off his helmet cover and stuck it into the dog's collar, and the dog ran off again, but in about four hours ambulance men came and liberated us. I am convinced that we should have died a miserable death in that cellar if the dog hadn't found us."

No ambulance dogs have as yet been decorated with the Iron Cross, though many of their leaders have won it.

COZY CORNERS FOR BEAUS.

Varick House Has Newest Ideas in Boarding House Theory.

Cozy corners for their beaus and special rooms for fudge parties are offered to the guests of the Varick House, a model boarding place for girls, at 11 Dominick street, New York city.

This is a modern six story building with accommodations for eighty young women, each of whom will be charged $1 a week for lodging and board, including lunches. Nothing has been spared in the attempt to make this new structure homelike and attractive. The rooms are all single and comfortably furnished. There will be as few rules as possible and no red tape.

It is the desire of the people of the Spring Street Presbyterian church, who have financed the scheme, that there shall be no institutional air about the premises. Varick House expects to draw the major part of its guests from the factory neighborhood which surrounds it. Miss Margaret Shorner, a recent Bryn Mawr graduate, will be in charge.

Two Marriage Ceremonies.

In spite of the fact that each had to pay 25 cents admission, so many wished to witness the hallelujah wedding celebrated at the Salvation Army hall in Grass Valley, Cal., that the hall was unable to accommodate the large crowd. There were cries for an overflow meeting, but the principals, Miss Emily G. Church and Thomas Barri-man, declined to go through the ceremony twice.

At the County Fair.

"Why does the tight-rope professor carry that large five-cent cigar in the corner of his mouth? Is it bravado?" "Not at all. He uses that to balance with."

DON'T NEGLECT That Sale Advertising

You are going to have a sale, you say, that should amount to a good bit over $1000 if you get good prices.

To get good prices you must have the bidders--the people with money. Those are the people who read the news papers.

They read the sale advertising to see where they may buy what they want. Your neighbors all know what you have to sell. It is the man who lives five miles away that will look to the paper to find what you offer; and two times out of three he the best bidder.

Don't let him miss seeing your ad. It may cost $1.00 or so more to advertise thoroughly than it would to do it "half-way;" but if that $1.00 gets you a single bidder the advertisement will pay for itself.

Experience here has taught us that it pays.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a small party, are on their way down the Irrawaddy to the landing place for Rangoon to cash a draft for $50,000.

CHAPTER II.—Elsa Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington come aboard the boat at the landing and, amazed at his likeness to her fiancé, Arthur Ellison, asks the purser to introduce her. Conservative English passengers are shocked at her breach of the conventionalities.

CHAPTER III.—The purser tells Elsa that Warrington, the outcast adventurer, has been indicted and sold his oil claims for $20,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and warns her against acquaintance with unknown adventures—himself, in fact.

CHAPTER IV.—Warrington and Elsa pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip.

CHAPTER V.—In Rangoon Warrington banks his draft, pays old debts, and while sitting with James in his old lodgings overhears and interferes in a row over cards in the next room.

CHAPTER VI.—Warrington finds that the row in the next room is caused by an enemy, Newell Craig, and threatens to shoot him unless he leaves town. Elsa goes for a walk with Martha, is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a hatpin. Warrington bids Elsa good-by. She does not tell him that she is to sail on the same ship for Singapore.

CHAPTER VII.—Martha writes to Arthur Ellison of the rapidly growing friendship between Elsa and the outcast American adventurer. Warrington discovers Elsa on the Singapore steamer and realizes his hopeless love and his duty to protect her against himself. Elsa tells him of her engagement.

CHAPTER VIII.—Warrington avoids Elsa, who thinks he may be ill and makes inquiries, regardless of the misinterpretation of her concern. Craig is abroad, is warned by Warrington, and calls him Paul, so letting him know that he is a close friend of his ten years before he came for nothing.

CHAPTER IX.—Warrington ceases to avoid Elsa. Craig sits up with her. Elsa tells Warrington of the hatpin incident and he hunts up Craig, on murder bent, only to find him stretched out drunk on deck.

CHAPTER X.—Warrington turns the hose on Craig. He tells Elsa that he is a man under a cloud and to be avoided, but Elsa refuses. She sets the cut direct from society passengers.

CHAPTER XI.—At Penang Mallow, who drove Warrington from his plantation when he learned his story, comes aboard. Warrington tells Elsa that Mallow and Craig both will tell that he spent money that did not belong to him over the gambling table to Craig and asks her not to speak to him again.

CHAPTER XII.—Mallow baits Craig, who keeps his temper. At Singapore Elsa calls on her father's old friend the American consul general. Mallow also calls and relates the steamer gossip about Elsa.

CHAPTER XIII.—Warrington calls on the consul general and sends a cable to the Andes Construction company, offering to restore the stolen money if they will lift the ban. Elsa defends Warrington to the consul general, who is dubious.

CHAPTER XIV.—Elsa dines at the consul general's and meets the old English colonel who cut her on the ship. He apologizes, talks with her about conventional society rules and tells her that Warrington's real name is Paul Ellison.

CHAPTER XV.—Elsa and Craig, a Chinaman, rob Warrington of his letter of credit at the hotel.

CHAPTER XVI.

Who is Paul Ellison?

For some time Warrington sat upon the edge of the bed and studied the cigar, balanced it upon his palm, as if striving to weigh accurately Mallow's part in a scrimmage like this. The copra grower assuredly would be the last man to give a cigar to a Chinaman. Mallow, rich, was Mallow disposed of, at least logically; unless indeed it was a bit of anticipatory reprisal. That might possibly be. A drunken Mallow was capable of much for all that his knowledge of letters of credit might necessarily be primitive.

Yet Mallow was no fool. He would scarcely take such a risk for so unstable and chancy a thing as revenge of this order. Craig? He hadn't the courage. Strong and muscular as he was, he was the average type of gambler, courageous only when armed with a pack of cards, sitting opposite a fool and his money. But Craig and Mallow together. . . . He slipped off the label. It was worth preserving.

With an unpleasant laugh he began to get into his clothes. Why not? The more he thought of it, the more he was positive that the two had been behind this assault. The belt would have meant a good deal to Craig. There were a thousand Chinese in Singapore who would cut a man's throat for a Straits dollar. Either Mallow or Craig had seen him counting the money on shipboard.

He looked at his watch; quarter after two. If they were not in their rooms he would have good grounds for his suspicions. He stole along the gallery and down the stairs to the office, just in time to see the two enter, much the worse for drink. Mallow was boisterous, and Craig was sullen. The former began to argue with the night manager, who politely shook his head. Mallow grew insistent, but the night manager refused to break the rules of the hotel. Warrington inferred that Mallow was demanding liquor, and his inference was correct. He moved a little closer, still hidden behind the potted palms.

"All right," cried Mallow. "We'll go back to town for it."

"I've had enough," declared Craig sullenly. "Let's cut out booze and play a little hand or two."

"Fine!" Mallow slapped his thigh as he laughed. "Nice bird I'd be for you to pluck. Think of something else. The billiard hall is open."

Craig shook his head. When Mallow was argumentative it was no time to play billiards.

"Bah!" snarled Mallow. "Since you won't drink like a man nor play billiards, I'm for bed. And just as the fun was beginning!"

Craig nudged him warningly. Mallow stalked away, and Craig, realizing that the night was done, followed.

Warrington had seen and heard enough. He was tolerably sure. It might have been out of pure devilry, so far as Mallow was concerned; but Craig had joined in hope of definite profits. A fine pair of rogues!

He eyed indecisively the stairs and then glanced toward the brilliant night outside. It would not be possible to sleep in that room again. So he tipped out to the cafe veranda and dropped into a comfortable chair. He would hunt them up some time during the day. He would ask Mallow for fifty pounds, and he sincerely hoped that Mallow would refuse him. For he was grimly resolved that Mallow should pay for those half-truths, more damning than bald lies. It was due to Mallow that he was never more to see or speak to Elsa. He emptied the ash from his cutty which he stowed away.

The great heartache and the greater disillusion would not have fallen to his lot had Elsa been frank in Rangoon, had she told him that she was to sail on the same steamer. He would have put over his sailing. He would have gone his way, still believing himself to be a Bayard, a Galahad or any other of those simple dreamers who put honor and chivalry above and before all other things.

Elsa! He covered his face with his hands and remained in that position for a long while, so long indeed that the coolies, whose business it was to scrub the things every morning at four, went about their work quietly for fear of disturbing him.

Elsa had retired almost immediately after dinner. She endeavored to finish some initial work on old embroideries, but the needle insisted upon pausing and losing stitch after stitch. She went to bed and strove to sleep, but that sweet healer came not to her wooing. Nothing she did could overcome the realization of the shock she had received. It had left her dull and bewildered.

The name echoed and re-echoed through her mind: Paul Ellison. It should have been an illumination; instead, she had been thrust into utter darkness. Neither Arthur nor his mother had ever spoken of a brother, and she had known them for nearly ten years. Two men, who might be twin brothers, with the same name; it was maddening. What could it mean? The beautiful white-haired mother, the handsome charming son, who idolized each other; and this adventurer, this outcast, this patient, brave and kindly outcast, with his funny parakeet, what was he to them and they to him? It must be, it must be! They were brothers. Nature, full of amazing freaks as she was, had not perpetrated this one without calling upon a single strain of blood.

She lay back among her pillows, her eyes leveled at the few stars beyond her door, opened to admit any cooling breeze. Her head ached. It was like the computations of astronomers; to a certain extent the human mind could grasp the distances but could not comprehend them. It was more than chance. Chance alone had not brought him to the crumbling ledge. There was a strain of fatalism in Elsa. She was positive that all these things had been written long before and that she was to be used as the key.

Paul Ellison.

She drew from the past those faint recollections of Arthur and his mother: First, the day the two had called regarding the purchase of a house that her father had just put on the market—a rambling old colonial affair, her own mother's birthplace. Sixteen; she had not quite been that, just free from her school days in Italy. With the grand air of youth she had betrayed the fact almost instantly, while waiting for her father to come into the living room.

"Italy!" said Arthur's mother, whom Elsa mentally adopted at once. The stranger spoke a single phrase, which Elsa answered in excellent if formal Italian. This led from one question to another. Mrs. Ellison turned out to be a schoolmate of her mother's, and she, Elsa, had inherited their very room. What more was needed?

The Ellisons bought the house and lived quietly within it. Society, and there was a good deal of it in that small Kentuckian city, society waited for them to approach and apply for admittance, but waited in vain. Mrs. Ellison never went anywhere. Her son Arthur was a student and preferred his books. So eventually society introduced itself. Persons who ignored it must be interesting. When it became known that Mrs. Ellison had been the schoolmate of the beautiful and aristocratic wife of General Chetwood; when the local banker quietly spread the information that the Ellisons were comfortably supplied with stocks and bonds of a high order, society concluded that it could do very well without past history. That could come later.

With her father dead, Elsa became as much at home in the Ellison house as in her own. But never, never anywhere in the house, was there indication of the existence of a brother, so like Arthur that under normal conditions it would have been difficult to tell them apart. Even when she used to go up to the garret with Mrs. Ellison, to aid her in rummaging some old trunk, there came to light none of those trifling knickknacks which any mother would have secretly clung to, no matter to what depth her flesh and blood had fallen. Never had she seen among the usual amateur photographs one presenting two boys. Once she had come across a photograph of a smooth-faced youth who was in the act of squinting along the top of an engineer's tripod. Arthur had laughingly taken it away from her, saying that it represented him when he had had ambitions to build bridges.

To build bridges. The phrase awoke something in Elsa's mind. Bridges. She sat up in bed, mentally keen for the first time since dinner. "I have built bridges in my time over which trains are passing at this moment. I have fought torrents, and floods, and hurricanes, and myself."

He was Paul Ellison, son and brother, and they had blotted him out of their lives by destroying all physical signs of him. There was something inhuman in the deliberateness of it, something unforgivable.

They had made no foolish attempt to live under an assumed name. They had come from New York to the little valley in order to leave behind the scene of their disgrace and all those who had known them. Arthur was an inveterate traveler. Half the year found him in Europe, painting a little, writing a little less, frequenting the lesser known villages in France and Italy. He did not care for horses, for hunting, for sports of any kind. And yet he was sturdy, clear-eyed, fresh-skinned. He walked always; he was forever tramping off to the pine-hooded hills, with his painting kit over his shoulders and his camp stool under his arm. Later, Elsa began to understand that he was a true scholar, not merely an educated man. He was besides a linguist of amazing facility, a pianist who invariably preferred as his audience his own two ears. Arthur would have been a great dramatist or a great poet, if. . . . If he had fought for prizes coveted by man kind, if he had thrown aside his dreams and gone into the turmoil, if he had taken up a man's burden and carried it to success. Elsa, daughter of a man who had fought in the great arena from his youth to his death. Elsa was not meant for the wife of a dreamer.

Paul Ellison. What was his crime in comparison to his exclamation of it? He had built bridges, fought torrents, hurricanes, himself. No, he was not a scholar; he saw no romance in the multifarious things he had of necessity put his hand to; these had been daily matter-of-fact occupations. A strange gladness seemed to loosen the tenseness of her aching nerves.

Then, out of the real world about her, came with startling distinctness, the shriek of a parrot. She would have recognized that piercing cry anywhere. It was Rajah. In the next room, and she had not known that Warrington (she would always know him by that name) was stopping at the same hotel! She listened intently. Presently she heard muffled sounds; a clatter of metal. A few minutes later came softer tinkle, scurry of pattering feet, then silence.

Elsa ran to the door and stood motionless by the jamb, waiting, ethereally white in the moonshine. She should have gone back to bed, but a thrill of unknown fear held her. She saw Warrington, fully dressed, issue forth cautiously, glance about, then pass down the gallery, stepping with the lightness of a cat.

She returned hastily to her room, threw over her shoulder a kimono, and went back to the door, hesitating there for a breath or two. She stepped out upon the gallery, walked as far as Warrington's door, and paused there. The gallery floor was strewn with moonlight and shadow. She saw something lying in the center of a patch of light, and she stooped. The light was too dim for her to read; so she re-entered her own room and turned on the light. It was Warrington's letter of credit. She gave a low laugh, perhaps a bit hysterical. There was no doubt of it. Someone had entered his room. There had been a struggle in which he had been the stronger, and the thief had dropped his plunder. (As a matter of fact, the Chinaman, sud-ding himself closed in upon, had thrown the letter of credit toward the railing, in hope that it would fall over to the ground below, where, later, he could recover it.) Elsa pressed it to her heart as another woman might have pressed a rose, and laughed again. Something of his; something to give her the excuse to see and to speak to him again. Tomorrow she would know; and he would tell her the truth, even as her heart knew it now. For what other reason had he turned away from her that first day out of Rangoon, hurt and broken? Paul Ellison; and she had told him that she was going home to marry his brother!

the best rates of seeding and have found that from fifteen to twenty pounds to the acre are generally best under Badger State conditions.

Southern and northern grown seed have also been tried out in competition with each other. The reason has been that southern and southwestern seed, which usually is somewhat cheaper, seems to do as well under Wisconsin conditions as that grown farther north.

The Wisconsin Alfalfa association numbers 1,000 members and is steadily growing in popularity and influence. The policy of the organization is a conservative one, its members not desiring to encourage the growing of alfalfa in places where clover grows more easily and luxuriantly.

 NOTES ON HOG CARE. *****

Use your skim milk. Five pounds of skim milk have been found equal to a pound of grain for pigs.

It is well known that pigs under cleanly conditions thrive much better than those in filthy surroundings.

Cholera and other diseases of swine attack herds which are in poor condition, and consequently most susceptible.

Keep the sows and pigs away from fattening hogs and give them feeds that produce flesh and bone rather than fat.

Free range for hogs does not mean that they should be allowed to run in the highways and through the neighbors' fences.

If you have anything the matter with your hogs just put them on a diet of dry oats and water and see how quickly they will come around.

Scientific Farming

LIMING THE SOIL.

Old Problem Whose Value Is Not Properly Realized.

The problem of liming the soil is an old one, but very few farmers realize the value that it has to the field products. In the first place, lime is not a fertilizer, as I have heard some farmers say. It may be called a supplementary fertilizer, but that is as close as we can get. We know that it is needed to improve the soil conditions, and that is the main idea that should be known by every tiller of the soil.

Lime materials not only furnish calcium, which is essential for the growth of crops, but they have the power of improving the mechanical condition of both the sands and clays. This they do by binding the materials more firmly together. In talking to a farmer the other day about the lime problem he compared the action of lime on the soil to the process of making popcorn balls. The grains of popcorn are held together by the molasses, and in the same way the lime holds the soil particles in close contact with one another.

In the case of sands, lime thus renders them more compact and improves their water holding power. With clays, the tenacity of which is largely due to the fineness of the particles, the lime causes the fine particles to adhere to one another, and these aggregations make the soil act like one composed of larger particles. From this we see that it improves the mechanical condition, renders the soil more easily cultivated, and it is better aerated. Frost and humus also improve the physical state of sticky, impervious soils, but lime is possibly the most potent agency, and it is certainly the agency most readily controlled by the farmer.

We find that lime also corrects or neutralizes the acid which naturally forms in the soils.—Ohio Farmer.

EXPERIMENTS WITH ALFALFA.

The Best Rates of Seeding Under Certain Conditions.

Only by systematic experimentation on the part of the individual growers living in various sections can be proved the true worth of alfalfa as a soil improver and a forage plant.

This was the opinion which L. F. Graber, secretary of the Alfalfa Order of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment association, expressed at the organization meeting of the Kentucky Alfalfa Growers' association. He reported that in Wisconsin many of the growers have been carrying on experiments for several years to determine the best rates of seeding and have found that from fifteen to twenty pounds to the acre are generally best under Badger State conditions.

Southern and northern grown seed have also been tried out in competition with each other. The reason has been that southern and southwestern seed, which usually is somewhat cheaper, seems to do as well under Wisconsin conditions as that grown farther north.

The Wisconsin Alfalfa association numbers 1,000 members and is steadily growing in popularity and influence. The policy of the organization is a conservative one, its members not desiring to encourage the growing of alfalfa in places where clover grows more easily and luxuriantly.

CARRANZA TAKES MEXICAN CAPITAL

Oregon Leads His Victorious Forces Into City.

BUSINESS HOUSES REOPEN

The New Authorities Have Re-established Order and Feeling of Confidence Prevails.

Mexico City, Jan. 30.—The capital is again in the hands of the forces of General Carranza, who while acting as the provisional president of the government, was forced to leave Mexico City early in November under the threat of the advancing troops of Generals Villa and Zapata, who disagreed with his policies.

The new authorities have re-established order in the capital and a general feeling of confidence prevails in the city.

It has been established that the shooting which occurred in the main plaza, before the National Palace, when General Alvaro Obregon, at the head of the Carranza forces, reached that place, was done by snipers, hidden on the roof of the cathedral.

General Obregon said that the shots undoubtedly were directed at him and that it was an attempted assassination. The perpetrators have not been captured. Three soldiers were killed and a number wounded during the firing.

All the saloons are closed as the result of an order by the authorities, but the commercial houses and banks will resume business immediately.

Late Thursday afternoon and in the early evening 20,000 additional Carranza troops, consisting of three branches of arms, entered the capital and marched to the quarters selected for them by General Obregon.

The Zapatista troops, who left the city on the appearance of General Obregon and his forces, have retreated to the southward.

Carranza Leaves For Capital. Vera Cruz, Jan. 30.—The occupation of Mexico City created no surprise here, since that event has been expected for some days. General Carranza left for Mexico City at once.

So sure was General Carranza of the retaking of the capital that the postmaster general and a sufficient number of employees to handle the postal department are already on the way to Mexico City. Sixty telegraphers have also been sent there.

Mexican Port Shelled.

On Board U. S. S. San Diego, off Mexican West Coast, Jan. 30.—A Carranza force aboard the steamer Korrigan II, recently commandeered, shelled the port of San Blas.

An attempt to land artillery was repulsed. At this juncture the United States cruiser Cleveland appeared and the Korrigan II sailed northward.

Villa Reported Wounded.

Washington, Jan. 30.—An unconfirmed report in Mexico City that General Villa had been seriously injured was received from Consul Silliman.

Mr. Silliman also sent word that General Obregon, the Carranza leader, entered Mexico City with 10,000 men. The dispatch stated that order prevailed.

When Mr. Silliman sent his message no temporary form of government had been announced. A few Zapatista adherents were captured, and it was reported that there were some casualties. General Obregon sent out forces to occupy suburban towns.

COMMITTEE REJECTS VETO

Decides to Report Immigration Bill to House Next Thursday.

Washington, Jan. 30.—The house immigration committee voted to reject the president's veto of the immigration bill.

It was decided to report the bill to the house next Thursday, with the recommendation that it be passed over the president's veto, limiting debate to six hours.

Falls 300 Feet to Death in Mine.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 30.—Paul Savat fell a distance of 300 feet down the Woodward shaft of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western company, to his death. He was about to step on the mine carriage when a signal from the foot tender sent the carriage down the mine. Savat stepped into the mouth of the shaft and fell to the bottom.

Lamp Explodes; Kills Boy.

West Chester, Pa., Jan. 30.—Howard Sylvester, eight years old, son of Walter Sylvester, while studying his school lessons with another boy at his home, was fatally burned by a coal oil lamp exploding. The table on which the lamp rested was upset, causing the lamp to overturn.

Fire Destroys Newark Block.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 30.—Fire swept a four-story building which takes in an entire block on St. Francis street, causing damage estimated at $100,000 and the death of one man and the serious injury of another. The man who was killed jumped from a four-story window.

WILSON SEES PROSPERITY

Predicts Greatest Industrial Activity Country Has Ever Known.

Washington, Jan. 30.—President Wilson delivered an important speech on the business outlook before the convention of the American Electric Railway association here.

He said an era of confidence is at hand, with all "interrogation points" and suspicion removed, and he predicted that in this atmosphere the country is about to enjoy a period of prosperity and enterprise greater than any the country has known.

The president appealed for an application of the spirit of sportsmanship to American business—a demand for what only each is entitled to and "no squealing" from those who were beaten in the race.

The president's speech made a deep impression upon his hearers, most of whom regarded it as his first intimate talk to the business men of the country.

MRS. ROGERS INDICTED

Two Murder Counts Against Mother Who Poisoned Children.

New York, Jan. 30.—The Bronx county grand jury returned an indictment charging murder on two counts against Mrs. Ida Sniffen Rogers, the "love wife" of Lorys Elton Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers caused the death of her two children by giving them bichloride of mercury. She is in the Lebanon hospital suffering from the effects of the same drug and could not be removed, although a bench warrant was issued for her arrest.

Price of Bread to Advance.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Higher prices for bread will be charged here next week if the plans of the Master Bakers' association are put into effect. Five-cent loaves for 6 cents; 10-cent loaves for 12 cents, was the program which was discussed and virtually decided on at a meeting of the association.

Parole Slayer 71 Years Old.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30.—Levi Montgomery, seventy-one years old, has been paroled by Governor Goldsborough after the aged prisoner had served eleven years of an eighteen-year sentence for the murder of Peter Hull, at Williamsport, Md.

Canal Opening Postponed.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Opening of the Panama canal will be postponed until July, according to official announcement by Secretary of the Navy Daniels after a cabinet session. The exact July date is to be fixed later.

Too Early.

When Ollie James, the world's largest United States senator, was a youngster down in Kentucky he went one summer to visit some relatives on a farm.

On the morning after his arrival the Ollie was awakened by a rude pounding on the door of one of the boys in the family. It was the father, and he made a remark that startled and totally surprised Ollie.

"Get up," said the father. "You're oversleeping yourself. It's almost 4 o'clock."

Ollie couldn't get over that "almost 4 o'clock." That afternoon he made some excuse to return home—New York Sun

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COLD ROAST BEEF.

Cold roast beef may be served in a great many ways that will appeal to the appetite. It may be used in the creation of salads or as the basis of cooked dishes suitable for luncheon or supper.

It very often happens that after there has been a roast from which the slices of cold beef have been served there is meat left which does not look well enough to be sent to the table in that form. From these dishes as the following may be concocted:

Cold Beef Salad.—Take cold roast beef and chop fine. Serve on lettuce leaves, with mayonnaise dressing. Another dressing may be made of yolk of hard boiled egg, melted butter, with vinegar to bind the ingredients. This may be served on the salad just as the mayonnaise would be.

With a Tasty Sauce.

Baked Beef With Sauce.—Take cold roast beef and put into a dripping pan together with a cupful of stock and allow to heat through. Turn and baste it often. Place on a hot platter and pour around it the following hot sauce: Melt a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan. Stir into it a spoonful of flour, keeping it smooth. Add a cupful of stock, a teaspoonful of Worcester-shire sauce, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and any kind of vegetable that may be left from previous meals, using two cupfuls or less, cut fine and added to the sauce. Turnips, carrots, peas or cauliflower may be used. When hot pour around the meat and serve.

Browned in the Oven.

Mutton of Beef.—Take thin slices of cold roast beef, three medium sized onions, a small bunch of herbs, half a pint of stock, a tablespoonful of vinegar, some bread crumbs, salt and pepper. Peel and slice the onions. Melt the dripping, add the onions and fry them a golden brown. Add the herbs, vinegar, stock, a pinch of powdered sugar and a seasoning of salt and pep-

AN ATHLETIC COSTUME.

Smart model for an athletic costume, having a six-gored skirt and waist with long sleeves.

This model looks well either in blue serge or white linen. Its only trimmings is a sailor tie of satin and an emblem embroidered on the sleeve. For its development 4½ yards of 44-inch material are required.

The waist is made first, beginning with the adjustment of the front and back.

per. Let all boil for ten minutes, skimming it well. Then strain it and see that it is nicely seasoned with pepper and salt. Cover the bottom of a pie dish with some of the sauce; then put in a layer of slices of beef, then more sauce, and so on. The last layer should be of sauce, and on this should be sprinkled a few crumbs. Place the dish in a pan containing boiling water, and put it in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. Serve hot.

The Scrap Book

Harvey's Joke on the President.

You know, of course, that Colonel Harvey recently visited President Wilson at the White House and that these two keen wits had a session together. Well, official etiquette forbids divulgence of presidential conversations, but a friend of a friend of a prominent inmate of the White House says that a little bird told him that Mark Twain's name came up in some connection and Colonel Harvey remarked casually that there still live persons who had never heard of the great humorist. The president found this almost incredible. "Oh, yes," the colonel continued. "Only yesterday, here in Washington, I met such a one. He was an office seeker. He declared positively he had never heard of Mark Twain. I asked him about Tom Sawyer. No, he had never heard of him, either. Nor Huck Finn? No, never. Nor Pudd'nhead Wilson? 'Oh, dear, yes,' he ejaculated. 'I voted for him.'"

And the president's roar of delight did not diminish in the least when Colonel Harvey continued softly, "And the office seeker added wistfully, 'that's all the good it done me.'"—New York Mail.

Forget the Past.

Rise, if the past detains you; Her sunshine and storms forget. No chains so unworthy to hold you As those of a vain regret. Sad or bright, she is lifeless ever. Cast her phantom arms away. Nor look back, save to learn the lesson Of a nobler strife today.

Jarred His Dignity.

James G. Blaine used to tell a story showing the contrast between senatorial dignity and presidential simplicity. He was a member of a joint committee to wait upon the president. Senator Foote of Vermont, one of the most dignified of men, was chairman.

On being ushered into the presence of President Lincoln Mr. Foote involuntarily struck an attitude and said in his stately manner, "Mr. President, we have been appointed a committee on the part of the two houses of congress to apprise you that they have met and organized and are ready to receive any communication which it may be your pleasure to make to them."

Mr. Lincoln stepped up and, taking him familiarly by one button, said, "Now, look here, Foote, if it is a matter of life and death with you I can send my message in today, but if it isn't I should like to keep it till tomorrow to slick it up a little."

Riley and the Scotchman.

Eugene Field was fond of relating the following story of James Whitcomb Riley: "To beguile the tediousness of the return voyage from Europe it was proposed to give a concert in the saloon of the ship, an entertainment to which all capable of amusing their fellow passengers should contribute. Mr. Riley was asked to recite some of his original poems, and of course he cheerfully agreed to do so. Among the number present at this mid-ocean entertainment, over which the Rev. Myron Reed presided, were two Scotchmen, very worthy gentlemen, en route from the land of cakes to the land of biscuits on a tour of investigation. These two shared the enthusiasm with which the auditors applauded Mr. Riley's charming recitations. They marveled that so versatile a genius could have lived in a land reputed for uncouthness and savagery. "Is it no' wonderfu', Donald," remarked one of these Scots, "that a tradesman said he sic a bonnie poet?" "And is he indeed a tradesman?" asked the one.

"Indeed he is," answered the other. "Did ye no' hear the dominie intyre him as the Hoosier poet? Just think of it, mon—just think of sic a gude poet dividing his time making hoosery!"

One on the Rector.

The little daughter of a local clergyman has reached the age where big words are apt to floor her and where she is very sensitive to the remarks of an older brother.

Not long ago she came running to her father.

"Papa, papa, George called me names."

"Why, what did George say?" "Oh," said the little girl, with a strong expression of disgust, "he said I practiced what I preached! I don't do it!"

"Well, my child, I—"

"But I don't, do I, papa? I don't any more than you do, do I?"

And then the rector choked up. But he took a half hour from his sermon and explained the meaning of the obnoxious expression to the best of his ability.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

VALUABLE DOG

By MARTHA V. MONROE

When Stephen Yardley returned from Europe he brought a dog with him. The animal was evidently not of a breed that would enable him to take a prize in a dog show, and since Yardley was rich and always had the best that money could buy there was some curiosity among his friends to know why the beast had taken his fancy. This was enhanced by noticing that Yardley led the dog down the gangway himself and on leaving the dock took him with him into the carriage.

"What did you pay for him?" asked a friend.

"Five thousand dollars."

"Five thousand dollars?"

"Yes, and ten thousand wouldn't buy him."

"There must be something about him that is not discernible to the eye. What is it?"

"I'll tell you. I was in Paris when the great European war broke out. Indeed, for the past few years I've been more in Paris than at home. Well, you know we Americans in Paris organized an American corps to join in the dispute between the allies and Germans. I enlisted—why I don't exactly know. The United States remained neutral, and I suppose we should have remained neutral, but we didn't. We went into it the way most men volunteer in war-time—to be in the excitement.

"Anyway, we formed a corps and after a certain amount of training were marched to the front. You remember that there was a lot of fighting in a wood near the center of the line. I was fighting one day in the wood when we suddenly came upon a lot of Germans, and a lively scrimmage followed. Our fellows were driven back, and I, shot in the body, was left on the field. The Germans didn't know that they had killed us, or fearing an ambush or something, retreated.

"Well, there I was, deserted by friend and foe, left to bleed to death in a wood. Night came on, and the horror and loneliness were enough to kill a man without his dying of a wound. Fortunately the cold weather had not yet come on, and I didn't suffer with the cold. It was a relief to see the day coming, for it brought a hope that there would be more fighting in the wood and I would be within the lines of either one side or the other.

"But the firing that began with dawn seemed to recede rather than approach. I had nothing to sustain me either of food or drink. I crawled toward the nearest dead body—a German—and tried to find some sustenance on him, but there was neither a crust of bread nor a swallow of water. I crawled on a little farther to a dead Frenchman and found some bread and a flask of wine.

"If it hadn't been for these I would have perished, for I lay there all that day and another night. I had stuffed a part of my shirt into my wound, and it choked up the bleeding, but I didn't dare draw a long breath for fear of starting the hemorrhage again. While I was intent on myself and my dreadful condition incidents about me were ever present. The birds that had been frightened away by the firing returned and were fitting in the branches above me. Insects were buzzing, attending to their daily affairs, unmindful that a human being was gradually sinking to death.

"Finally I fell into a stupor. I didn't know whether it was night or day and I didn't care. I heard a distant booming, but that was going on all the while. I heard the bark of a dog and had I been in a better condition might have especially noticed it. The bark sounding nearer, I made an effort to arouse myself. When it was close by me I opened my eyes and there was the dog looking at me and barking.

"Pretty soon he scampered off, barking as he ran; then I could hear him drawing nearer again. But I was too weak to take much notice of him. He was gone so long that I forgot all about him. But after awhile I heard his bark again far away, but drawing nearer. The next thing I knew I felt a hand on my wrist. Opening my eyes, there was a man with a red cross on his arm kneeling beside me.

"As soon as he knew that I lived he gave a call, and assistance came. I was put on a stretcher and carried to the rear, where I was placed in a hospital and received proper attention.

"As soon as I got well enough to think of anything except myself I asked about the dog that had saved me. I was told that he was one of the dogs that had been trained to hunt for the wounded. He had gone off into the wood where I lay and had come back barking and indicating that he wished to be followed. A man was sent with him and found me very near death's door. Probably another hour without attention would have finished me.

"I asked to see the dog, and he was brought to me. When I offered to buy him I was told that the Red Cross dogs were not for sale. Then I agreed to subscribe $1,000 to the Red Cross fund in exchange for him. My offer did not produce any effect till I raised it to $5,000. Then by some means the Red Cross managers got around the selling of one of their dogs for money, and my offer was accepted.

"And now you know why I have brought home a dog that originally was bought for perhaps $5 or $10, having paid $5,000 for him."

And Yardley hugged his pet.

His Hard Work.

"I want you to understand," said young Spender, "that I got my money by hard work." "Why, I thought it was left to you by your rich uncle."

"So it was, but I had hard work to get it away from the lawyers."—Life.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Carl Morris, Heavyweight,
Who Is Coming Back.

A little more than three years ago Carl Morris of Sapulpa, Okla., was regarded as the logical candidate for the crown of Jack Johnson. He was of enormous size, possessed of immense strength and had beaten every man he had gone against. Then came the memorable night of Sept. 15, 1911, when he crossed mitts with Jim Flynn, "the fighting fireman," at Madison Square Garden, New York. Although Flynn was six inches shorter and fifty pounds lighter than Morris, he gave him an unmerciful beating. Morris was game, but he lacked skill and ring experience. After that Carl lost decisions to several mediocre white hopes.

Now he is coming back. During the past year he has won nine fights out of ten by the knockout route and has twice laid low Jim Flynn, his ancient enemy. He has beaten every man who had previously won decisions over him and seems to have developed into a fairly clever ring general. He has yet to win from Gunboat Smith, who won from Carl on a foul.

New Baseball Play.

During the last game of the season at the Oakland (Cal.) grounds a play came up that escaped attention at the time, but since has created a deal of argument pro and con. This is how it happened: Fitzgerald was on third and O'Leary at bat when a ball caromed off Catcher Yantz's mitt and went to the grandstand. Krause covered the plate, but O'Leary was in the line of the throw, and the ball hit him on the back of the head, Fitz scoring.

Now, what is the decision? Captain Rodgers claimed interference, while Umpire Billy Phyle ruled that the runner scored. His contention was that O'Leary was in his rightful position in the batter's box and was watching the play without intentionally getting into the line of play. Phyle argues that O'Leary did not know where the ball went and that he stood where he belonged.

President Baum at first thought that the umpire was wrong and that there was interference, but after thinking it over he decided that the decision was right and one of the first of its kind he had ever heard of.

Jack Dempsey Was Game.

Bob Fitzsimmons, the greatest fighter in all the history of the ring, had his own theory of a knockout.

"It doesn't hurt anybody to be knocked out," Fitz used to say. "I like to be gentle and considerate and knock 'em out in a hurry. I put it over as soon as I can instead of beating them down gradually. The gentlest way is to land a clean one punch knockout. It doesn't even leave a headache."

Fitzsimmons once met a man who took a number of hard knockdowns and still struggled to his feet, at last standing in a nearly helpless condition and refusing to give up. This was Jack Dempsey, who was losing the world's middleweight championship. Fitzsimmons appealed to the referee to stop it and when that official declined because it was a championship fight turned to Dempsey and said: "Jack, you've done all a game man can do. I don't want to hit you again. Give it up."

"You'll have to knock me out," muttered Dempsey. And Fitz did.

Maulbetsch Spikes Rumor.

Halfback Johnny Maulbetsch of the University of Michigan was asked recently concerning the story that he ate two mince pies of his mother's making for dinner each night during the training season, pie being especially taboo by trainers for athletes during the playing season.

"The story was slightly exaggerated," replied the stocky Michigan player with the same modesty regarding his gastronomic prowess as he has shown regarding his football ability. "I rarely ate more than one and one-half pies for dinner."

Wisconsin Bars Negro Fighters.

The Wisconsin boxing commission ruled against granting a permit to a Milwaukee boxing club for a bout between Sam Langford and Sam McVey, negro heavyweights. Permits for contests in Wisconsin, it is announced, will be confined to white boxers.

Seek Proper Balance.

The true ideal both for the parents and the child is balance in character. The old Greeks did not fail while they lived out the maxim: "Nothing too much." The prodigy is no special comfort to himself or to his friends.

Your Money Back if It Fails

To Destroy Worms

You take no risk in buying SAL-VET at our store. The maker stands back of it—we stand back of it. If it does not destroy the intestinal and stomach worms and put your stock in top condition, you get your money back.

SAL-VET

The Great Worm Destroyer and Conditioner

is the best live stock insurance you can get. Worms suck the blood and sap the vitality of your stock—they eat your profits. Worms are your greatest enemies. SAL-VET destroys them.

We Sell the Genuine SAL-VET. This is the remedy you have seen advertised in your farm paper—the remedy recommended by many leading livestock authorities, to destroy worms and keep stock in condition. Ask for the free SAL-VET booklet.
